A usage is an established mode of dealing, which may determine the meaning to be imputed to acts or words. Miller v. Wiggins, 227 Pa. St. 564, 76 Atl. 711; Byrd v. Beall, 150 Ala. 122, 43 So. 749. The only possible function of the usage in the principal case would be to explain the terms of a consensual relationship, as the parties should have understood them. But since the right of a salvor to compensation is not based on consent, the usage is immaterial in so far as it shows a lack of consent to pay for salvage. See 33 HARV. L. REV. 453. Nor is it competent, in the absence of consideration, to prove an implied contract of the salvor not to claim compensation. The court is really changing the rule of law allowing recovery for salvage service. Even where parties contract subject to a usage, it will not be given effect if unreasonable or against public policy. Minneapolis Sash & Door Co. v. Metropolitan Bank, 76 Minn. 136, 78 N. W. 980; Dickinson v. Gay, 7 Allen (Mass.), 29. See 7 VIN. ABR. 180. Because it furthers a social interest in the conservation of wealth, salvage service enjoys great favor in the law. See BENEDICT, ADMIRALTY, 4 ed., § 224. To adopt a usage which removes compensation as an incentive to such service is undesirable.

DAMAGES — EXCESSIVE DAMAGES — COMPULSORY REMITTITUR. — In an action under a death statute, the jury awarded the plaintiff $5000 damages for the loss of his eleven-year-old child. The upper court finds $2500 the highest amount that could be reasonably awarded. Held, that the judgment be reduced to $2500, and affirmed. Interurban Railway Co. v. Trainer, 233 S. W. 816 (Ark.).

The usual practice where excessive damages have been awarded is to affirm the judgment, conditioned upon the plaintiff agreeing to a specified remittitur. Finch v. No. Pacific R. R. Co., 47 Minn. 36, 49 N. W. 329; No. Chicago St. R. R. Co. v. Wrixon, 150 Ill. 532, 37 N. E. 895. But see Watt v. Watt, [1905] A. C. 115. Cf. Lionell, Barber & Co. v. Deutsche Bank, London Agency, [1919] A. C. 304. And see Beach v. Bird & Wells Lumber Co., 135 Wis. 550, 116 N. W. 245. See Austin W. Scott, "Progress of the Law, 1918-1919 — Civil Procedure," 33 HARV. L. REV. 236, 248. If the plaintiff is allowed the greatest amount which the jury could reasonably have given, and if there is no evidence that the size of the verdict was due to prejudice, neither party has any valid objection. The jury has found that the defendant is liable in at least that sum, and the court has found that the plaintiff is entitled to no more. Granting the validity of any remittitur, there seems to be no reason why the court should not, as in the principal case, compel it, whether the plaintiff agrees or not. To permit the plaintiff to force a new trial on the chance of getting more than he is, ex hypothesi, entitled to, can serve no just purpose. Yet only a few courts have hitherto adopted compulsory remittitur. Rice v. Crescent City R. R. Co., 51 La. Ann. 108, 24 So. 791; Wichita & Colorado Ry. Co. v. Gibbs, 47 Kan. 274, 27 Pac. 991. And the United States Supreme Court has held in a tort action that it violates the constitutional guaranty of trial by jury in Federal courts. Kennon v. Gilmer, 131 U. S. 22.

DAMAGES — MEASURE OF DAMAGES — IMPAIRED PURCHASING POWER OF MONEY. — In an action for damages for personal injuries, the jury were instructed that they might consider the impaired purchasing power of the dollar in assessing damages. The defendant excepted. Held, that the exception be overruled. Halloran v. New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., 115 Atl. 143 (Vt.).

Damages for personal injuries commonly include at least three elements, viz., compensation for medical expenses, for physical pain and mental suffering, and for loss of earnings. The first occasions no difficulty in computation. The second is an expression of the value which the jurors attach to an
